

HEAD OF HERITAGE LEARNING (3 year fixed-term contract)

Carlisle Cathedral is in an exciting period of change. Our £3.5 million partner funded NLHF project to bring our Grade 1 Fratry building to life will deliver a new, dedicated learning space, a café with excellent food and beautiful views, and a Fratry Hall with stunning interpretation. We are mid-way through the build, and on schedule to complete this December.

A key output of the work is the delivery of a vibrant, compelling and lively learning offer to schools, families, universities, local communities, interest groups and the 150,000 visitors we welcome each year. This is a new, full-time post and we seek an experienced learning professional eager to make a significant difference to the Cathedral's life and to establish it as a must-see attraction with an unmissable learning offer.

We are looking for a Head of Heritage Learning to:

- Deliver a significantly scaled-up learning offer to English and Scottish schools, university students, families, adults, and a wide range of community groups
- Drive and deliver a sustainable increase in the numbers of people from our identified target audiences who take part in learning activities
- Accurately manage the budget for these activities, meeting income targets
- Develop and implement a plan to evaluate the impact and success of learning offers
- Research external funding opportunities and contribute to bids to fund learning activity beyond the life of this post
